

Emmett Bennett-Rohrer

August 13, 2005 - April 11, 2020

Emmett and I met when he came for a home visit with his foster Mom in the summer of 2009. Once we were all in the backyard, Emmett immediately ran to the pool and sank straight to the bottom. He was pulled out quickly, and I spent the rest of the visit holding him in my lap while he was drying and wrapped in a pool towel. I knew then and there that he had just picked me to be his forever Mom. I picked him up from his foster home two weeks later. (We stopped at a pet store on the way home for supplies and a life vest!) We have been inseparable ever since, figuratively and literally. Emmett was my rock, my best friend, my emotional support, my soulmate, and my first baby. When I met my husband, Brian, they immediately took to each other and he treated Emmett with such love and compassion. Emmett soon became Brian's best friend and first baby, too. After the birth of our daughter Isabella last year, Emmett became a silent/not so silent cheerleader for us. It would be Isabella in one arm and Emmett in the other when we were on the couch. He loved her so. Emmett had the biggest heart and he loved so fiercely.

For Emmett's "Gotcha Day" every year, we would get him a cheeseburger from Burger King and he would practically unhinge his jaw to eat it. He also loved pizza so much that, sometimes, we thought he would pass out from barking so loudly as soon as he smelled it!

There is not a day that will go by that I won't long for Emmett in my arms. But for now, we want to try and think about him up there being able to walk and run again (and not sinking when he swims). We hope he is barking that crazy Pug bark and playing with his pup friends and loved ones. And eating pizza and cheeseburgers. LOTS of pizza and cheeseburgers.

He took a big piece of our hearts with him. Life won't ever be the same without Emmett. I will feel lonely from now on walking anywhere without my "shadow". We love you forever, Emmett.

"If love alone could have kept you here, you would have lived forever."
